With the spread of literacy specially in the advanced countries where education is compulsory libraries are necessary as water. There was a time not very long ago, when the knowledge of books was confined to a very selected class of men who were well off in worldly affairs. They were able to buy necessary books for their delight. But the great part of the population now-a days is composed of those who live from hand to mouth. They do not have the means with which to buy books. A person can not be expected to buy all the books that interest him. These are many costly books which it would be beyond the competence of most person to buy. The need felt for such expensive volumes can not be got by a public library.
